

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A dental restoration piece is provided which includes a base structure and an over structure which at least partially covers the base structure and which includes hardened bite elements. An interconnecting material interconnects the hardened bite elements with the base structure. In accordance with the inventive method of producing a dental restoration piece, the interconnecting material applied onto the base structure is hardened fully after the hardened bite elements have first been pressed into the still-malleable interconnecting material.

5

10